VAN DER GRAAF LAUNCHES EXTREME DUTY SERIES GEARED FOR MINING DEMANDS

After fifty years of success in Europe and twenty five in the United States, Van der Graaf has become the leader in motorized drive solutions and truly instinctive toward what the industry requires. Continuous product innovation has given this company the ability to offer one of the most advanced motorized pulleys on the market.

With a strong focus on excavation, Van der Graaf currently serves the mining and aggregate sector with a unique line of extreme duty motorized pulleys which target various bulk handling trades from ship loading, to power generation, to surface and underground mining. The extreme duty 'combi' seals incorporate a labyrinth cassette seal with an advanced wiper system that allows for operation in even the harshest conditions without the need to grease. This method ensures that no contaminants enter the pulley and completely eliminates maintenance.

Given the expected need for larger horse power mining motors, Van der Graaf dominates in its attempt to meet industry demands and is pleased to announce the latest features of their Extreme Duty Mining Series. Ranging from 40 to 360 HP (T2 Model), these units answer the call for large motorized power by providing a significant increase in capacity and endurance – construction made for the harshest environments. With their product being manufactured completely in house, Van der Graaf offers various custom design options including full coverage hot vulcanized rubber lagging along with several ceramic alternatives that make for excellent traction and abrasion resistance.

The aim at Van der Graaf has always been to provide each customer with the opportunities to look beyond any downturn that their business may be suffering and offer an advanced product at affordable rates that ensures one can be fully equipped to face the upturn of the future.
